One of the company was crowned with an inverted cushion, or pillow, and enthroned upon a table, while the rest at the merrymakers danced around him singing. A jcg. brimming with ale, was then presented to the Duke.* who was bound to drain it to the bottom, without spilling a drop, or permitting the coronal cushion to (all from his head. On March 19th, 1538-9, terminated the chequered career of Lord Edmund Howard, Norfolk s elder surviving brother. and father of the unfortunate lady who was destined to become Queen Katharine Howard. This son of the victor of Flodden appears to have been a person of no great force of character, possessing neither the commanding talents of the third Duke, nor the stick-at-nothing heroiss of his other brother, the Lord Admiral. Yet he showed a stubborn courage at Flodden,1 where he was Kings...
